Credits: 3. This class meets for two 75-minute class periods each week over the fall/spring semester and carries the expectation that students will work on course learning activities (reading, writing, problem sets, studying, etc) for about 3 hours out of classroom for every class period. The syllabus includes more information about meeting times and expectations for student work.

Course Description

Few topics in contemporary society have more sociological significance and public policy salience than the study of immigration, crime, and border enforcement. Drawing from research in law and the social sciences, this course engages both historical and present-day debates surrounding immigration and crime, with specific emphasis on (1) theories of migration and criminal behavior that inform these debates; (2) the motivation for, and effectiveness of, immigration enforcement; (3) the increasing use of criminal justice tools (e.g. the police and the prison) in border enforcement, and; (4) the experiences of living undocumented in the United States. Given that Hispanics comprise the largest group of foreign-born residents in the United States and the majority of undocumented immigrants in the US are from Mexico, a significant focus of this course will be on Latino immigration and the U.S.-Mexico border.

Learning Objectives

1. Students will develop an empirically grounded understanding of the trends in immigration, crime, and border enforcement in recent decades and be able to analyze these patterns through the application of theory in the social sciences.
2. Students will engage major theoretical, social, and political debates surrounding immigration and crime. Is immigration linked to crime? If so, how and what types of crime? Why do people migrate and how does this inform our understanding of criminal behavior? Does deportation affect crime? How has border enforcement changed in recent decades?
3. Students will develop a broader understanding of border enforcement through critical analysis of immigration policies and practices from an international perspective. That is, students will ask and answer if the recent trends in border enforcement are unique to the United States?

- Through engagement with course readings and class discussion, students will establish a foundation for critically assessing the often controversial issues surrounding immigration enforcement.

Required Materials

All course readings are available on canvas.

Course Grading

Your grade is based on two exams, one paper, and two written evaluations of articles published in peer-reviewed journals.

Exam I	25%
Exam II	25%
Article Eval. I	20%
Article Eval. II	20%
Participation	10%

Grading: The standard UW grading scale will be used.

Total Percent	Grade	Total Percent	Grade
93-100	A	70-76.99	C
87-92.99	AB	60-69.99	D
83-86.99	B	<60	F
77-82.99	BC

Exams: There will be two exams in this course. You are responsible for all material from lectures (including media) and the assigned readings for the exams. The exams will be some combination of multiple choice, short answer, and essays. The exams will not technically be cumulative, but there are concepts that will carry over from the previous parts of the course for which you will be responsible. There will be no makeup exams without a valid, documented excuse.

Participation: Your participation is gauged by your attendance. You are allowed to miss three classes without penalty. More than three unexcused absences will adversely affect your grade. We will be using the Acadly to take attendance. This is a free app you will need to download to your phone. The join code is UU2GM9. It is also VERY important that you do the readings and participate in class. The class size is ideal for generating good discussions and I will count on you all to be able to speak knowledgeably about course materials.

Article Evaluations: The ability to evaluate evidence is a central and necessary skill. In these assignments your goal is to systematically evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of three peer-reviewed articles, each of which examine critical issues on immigration. These written evaluations should be approximately 3 single-spaced pages and contain the following sections:

- Research Question:* what is the research question(s) being examined?
- Research Gap:* There are only two kinds of research articles; you're either doing something new or something different. Explain the gap that this article seeks to fill? How do they plan to do that?

- 3) Evaluation: what do they conclude? Do they offer convincing evidence for their conclusion? The question to ask yourself is this: do you buy it? If so, why? If not, tell me why you think that? (note: this should be the biggest section of the essay)
- 4) Further Research: what is left unanswered? How could this study be improved?

Course Policies and Friendly Reminders

- Classroom Civility. The study of immigration and crime requires discussing sensitive and often controversial topics that may be uncomfortable for some students. I encourage both good discussions and critical assessment of issues, however, I require that students will respect their peers and inflammatory remarks will be dealt with accordingly. The University of Wisconsin is committed to fostering diversity and inclusion and welcomes individuals of all ages, religions, sex, sexual orientations, races, nationalities, languages, military experience, disabilities, family statuses, gender identities and expressions, political views, and socioeconomic statuses. Behaviors that threaten, harass, discriminate or that are disrespectful of others will not be tolerated. Inappropriate behaviors will be addressed with disciplinary action, which may include being referred to the Dean of Students Office. Please visit UW's Nondiscrimination policy for more information: <https://oed.wisc.edu/statement-of-non-discrimination.htm>.
- Accommodations. Please inform the instructor if you are eligible for necessary accommodations for testing, assignments, or other aspects of the course. This may be the case if English is your second language or you experience a physical or psychological condition that makes it difficult for you to complete assignments and/or exams without some modification of those tasks. Accommodations are provided for students who qualify for disability services through the McBurney Center. Their website has detailed instructions about how to qualify: <https://mcburney.wisc.edu/>
- Academic honesty. As with all courses at the University of Wisconsin, you are expected to follow the University's rules and regulations pertaining to academic honesty and integrity. The standards are outlined by the Office of the Dean of Students at <http://www.students.wisc.edu/doso/academic-integrity/>. According to UWS 14, academic misconduct is defined as:
 - seeks to claim credit for the work or efforts of another without authorization or citation
 - uses unauthorized materials or fabricated data in any academic exercise
 - forges or falsifies academic documents or records
 - intentionally impedes or damages the academic work of others
 - engages in conduct aimed at making false representation of a student's academic performance
 - assists other students in any of these acts.
- Other Issues. It is important that YOU stay on top of issues as it relates to the class. The worst thing you can do is come to me at the end of the semester and bring up issues that happened weeks and months earlier.

Departmental notice of grievance and appeal rights. The Department of Sociology regularly conducts student evaluations of all professors and teaching assistants near the end of the semester. Students who have more immediate concerns about this course should report them to the instructor or to the chair, 8128 Social Science.

Department learning objectives. Beyond the specific substantive and methodological content described above, the course is designed to achieve the following instructional objectives designated as priorities by the Department of Sociology:

Critically Evaluate Published Research. Sociology graduates will be able to read and evaluate published research as it appears in academic journals and popular or policy publications.

Communicate Skillfully: Sociology majors write papers and make oral presentations that build arguments and assess evidence in a clear and effective manner.

Critical Thinking about Society and Social Processes: Sociology graduates can look beyond the surface of issues to discover the "why" and "how" of social order and structure and consider the underlying social mechanisms that may be creating a situation, identify evidence that may adjudicate between alternate explanations for phenomena, and develop proposed policies or action plans in light of theory and data.
